(Cambridge, MA) FIGMENT, a free, participatory arts event for all ages, will make its debut in the Boston area this June. The event will take place on Memorial Drive in Cambridge on June 5, from 12 to 6pm.

FIGMENT's aim is to provide a forum for the creation and display of participatory and interactive art from emerging artists in a variety of disciplines ranging from sculpture to visual art to music, performance, and multidisciplinary work.

The first FIGMENT Boston event has been made possible through a collaboration with the Cambridge Arts Council. The event will be co-located with the Cambridge Arts Council's long-running Cambridge River Festival.

Powered entirely by the efforts of volunteers, FIGMENT is completely free to the public. The hundred or more family-friendly, interactive exhibits, performances, and scheduled activities reflect FIGMENT's commitment to audience and artist interaction and civic/community participation.

Currently in its fourth year, FIGMENT is a non-commercial, de-commodified, environmentally-responsible event. No art is sold at FIGMENT and no one makes a profit. There are no corporate sponsors.
